From Intellectual Roots to Radical Activism

Both Ruth First and Joe Slovo emerged from backgrounds that, while different, fostered a critical perspective on the injustices of South African society.

Ruth First: The Journalist and Intellectual Firebrand

Born Ruth First in Johannesburg in 1925, she hailed from a family deeply involved in anti-fascist and communist politics. Her parents, Julius and Tilly First, were prominent activists, instilling in Ruth a profound sense of social justice from a young age. She attended the University of the Witwatersrand, where she studied sociology and developed a sharp intellect and a keen observational eye. Her early career as a journalist for publications like "The Guardian" and later "New Age" provided her with a powerful platform to expose the realities of apartheid. She was a meticulous researcher and a fearless reporter, documenting the systemic discrimination, poverty, and violence inflicted upon Black South Africans. Her writings were not just reports; they were potent calls to action, awakening consciences both within South Africa and internationally. She understood the power of words to challenge oppressive narratives and galvanize opposition.

Joe Slovo: The Lawyer and Military Strategist

Joe Slovo, born in Lithuania in 1926, emigrated to South Africa with his family at a young age. He too was exposed to political discourse early on, witnessing firsthand the racial inequalities of his adopted homeland. After serving in World War II, he pursued a law degree, which not only equipped him with a deep understanding of legal frameworks but also offered him insights into how these frameworks could be manipulated to uphold injustice. Slovo's legal career provided him with a unique vantage point. He often defended political activists and trade unionists, further solidifying his commitment to the struggle for liberation. His legal acumen was matched by a pragmatic and strategic mind, qualities that would become crucial in the later stages of the anti-apartheid war.

Embracing the Struggle: The ANC and SACP

Both Ruth First and Joe Slovo found their ideological homes in the liberation movements of South Africa, particularly within the ANC and the SACP.

The African National Congress (ANC) and the Fight for Freedom

The ANC, founded in 1912, was the primary political organization spearheading the resistance against apartheid. Ruth First became a prominent member, contributing significantly through her writing and political organizing. Her intellectual prowess made her a valuable asset in shaping the party's discourse and articulating its vision for a post-apartheid South Africa. She was instrumental in the internal debates and policy development within the ANC. Joe Slovo, while initially more aligned with the SACP, worked closely with the ANC. His strategic thinking and understanding of political dynamics were highly valued. The relationship between the ANC and the SACP was complex, often characterized by collaboration and shared goals, despite differing ideological nuances.

The South African Communist Party (SACP) and the Marxist Lens

The SACP played a crucial, albeit often clandestine, role in the anti-apartheid struggle. Ruth First and Joe Slovo were both leading figures within the party, embracing Marxist-Leninist ideology as a framework for understanding and dismantling colonial and capitalist exploitation inherent in the apartheid system. For Slovo, the SACP offered a structured and disciplined approach to revolutionary action. He rose through the ranks to become its General Secretary, a position he held for many years. His leadership was characterized by a blend of ideological conviction and practical, often military, strategy. He believed that the armed struggle was a necessary component of the fight against a violently oppressive state. Ruth First, through her writings and analyses, provided a critical Marxist critique of apartheid. Her book "The Proletariat in Kenya" (though focused on Kenya, it reflected her broader understanding of colonial economies) and her later works delved into the economic underpinnings of racial oppression. She saw apartheid not just as a political system but as an economic one designed to extract surplus value from Black labor.

The Turning Point: Banning and Exile

The apartheid regime responded to dissent with brutal repression. Both Ruth First and Joe Slovo, due to their activism and influence, became targets of state persecution.

Ruth First: Silenced but Not Defeated

In 1963, Ruth First was arrested and held in solitary confinement for 117 days without trial. This harrowing experience, detailed in her powerful memoir "117 Days," became a stark testament to the cruelty of the apartheid state. Following her release, she was banned, effectively prohibiting her from participating in political activities and requiring her to remain within certain geographical limits. Despite the severe restrictions, First continued her work, often from exile. She taught and lectured at universities abroad, using her intellectual platform to advocate for sanctions against South Africa and to expose the human rights abuses. Her exile was a painful separation from her homeland and her family, but it did not diminish her resolve.

Joe Slovo: From Lawyer's Chambers to Umkhonto we Sizwe

Joe Slovo, also facing increasing state scrutiny, became involved in the formation of Umkhonto we Sizwe (MK), the armed wing of the ANC, in 1961. As a legal expert, he understood the limitations of purely political protest against a state that met dissent with overwhelming force. He played a key role in the strategic planning and operationalization of MK, contributing to its clandestine activities aimed at disrupting the apartheid infrastructure. Like Ruth, Slovo eventually had to leave South Africa, facing arrest and imprisonment. His exile further solidified his commitment to the armed struggle, and he became a central figure in organizing and leading MK's operations from abroad. He was a key architect of the armed resistance, understanding the necessity of diversifying tactics to pressure the regime.

The Armed Struggle and International Solidarity

The transition to armed struggle marked a new phase in the war against apartheid. Ruth First and Joe Slovo, though often physically separated, were united in their commitment to this strategy.

Umkhonto we Sizwe: The Spear of the Nation

Under the leadership of figures like Joe Slovo, Umkhonto we Sizwe carried out acts of sabotage against government installations, power lines, and other symbols of apartheid infrastructure. The aim was not to inflict civilian casualties but to demonstrate the ANC's capacity to resist and to disrupt the economic and administrative machinery of the state. Slovo's strategic vision was crucial in guiding MK's operations, often in collaboration with other liberation movements in Southern Africa. He understood the importance of international support and training for MK.

The Role of International Sanctions and Diplomacy

Both First and Slovo were staunch advocates for international solidarity and the imposition of economic and political sanctions against South Africa. Ruth First, with her eloquent voice and extensive network, tirelessly lobbied governments, international organizations, and civil society groups to isolate the apartheid regime. She understood that the struggle within South Africa needed to be amplified on the global stage. Joe Slovo, through his leadership within the SACP and his connections with international communist parties and anti-colonial movements, also played a vital role in mobilizing international support for the liberation struggle.

Tragic Loss and Enduring Legacy

The fight for freedom came at a heavy price. Ruth First's life was tragically cut short, but Joe Slovo lived to see the dawn of a democratic South Africa, playing a crucial role in the transition.

The Assassination of Ruth First

In 1982, while working as a research professor at the University of Durham in England, Ruth First was assassinated by a parcel bomb. The apartheid regime's security forces were responsible for her murder, a chilling testament to their fear of her influence and her unwavering commitment to exposing their crimes. Her death sent shockwaves through the anti-apartheid movement and the international community, but it also served to galvanize further opposition. Her sacrifice became a symbol of the brutality of the regime and the courage of those who fought against it.

Joe Slovo: A Key Player in the Transition to Democracy

Joe Slovo survived the apartheid era and returned to South Africa after the release of Nelson Mandela in 1990. He played a pivotal role in the negotiations that led to the dismantling of apartheid and the establishment of a democratic government. As General Secretary of the SACP and a prominent ANC leader, he was instrumental in shaping the new South Africa's political landscape. He was a pragmatic negotiator, known for his ability to bridge ideological divides and build consensus. He served as Minister of Housing in the first democratic government, demonstrating his continued commitment to addressing the socio-economic inequalities that apartheid had entrenched. His vision for a non-racial South Africa, one where economic justice was intertwined with political freedom, continued to guide his actions. He was a staunch advocate for affirmative action and policies aimed at redressing the historical imbalances created by apartheid.

The Seeds of Rebellion: Early Lives and Political Awakening

Both Ruth First and Joe Slovo emerged from backgrounds that, while seemingly privileged, were deeply impacted by the injustices of apartheid. Ruth First, born in 1925, hailed from a prominent Jewish intellectual family in Johannesburg. Her parents, Marian and Julius First, were fervent communists and anti-apartheid activists, instilling in her from an early age a profound sense of social justice and a critical understanding of racial inequality. Her education at the University of Witwatersrand further sharpened her intellect and fueled her political engagement. She became a journalist, using her pen as a weapon against the discriminatory policies of the National Party government. Her early writings exposed the brutal realities of apartheid, bringing the plight of Black South Africans to the attention of a wider audience, both domestically and internationally.

Joe Slovo, born in 1926 in Lithuania, emigrated to South Africa with his family at the age of nine. Witnessing firsthand the racial stratification and exploitation prevalent in his adopted homeland, Slovo's own political consciousness was ignited. He too became involved in communist and anti-apartheid circles, his sharp mind and strategic acumen quickly making him a significant figure. His legal background provided him with a unique understanding of the legal framework used to uphold apartheid, which he would later use to challenge its very foundations. The shared experiences of witnessing and internalizing the injustices of apartheid provided the fertile ground for their lifelong dedication to the cause of liberation.

The Communist Party of South Africa (CPSA) and the United Democratic Front (UDF)

The Communist Party of South Africa (CPSA), later the South African Communist Party (SACP), played a pivotal role in the anti-apartheid struggle, and both Ruth First and Joe Slovo were central to its leadership. The SACP, though often operating underground due to government suppression, was instrumental in developing and articulating a coherent ideological framework for the resistance. They advocated for a non-racial, democratic South Africa, recognizing the interconnectedness of racial oppression and economic exploitation.

Ruth First's intellectual contributions were immense. Her seminal work, "South West Africa," exposed the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa and the brutal policies implemented there. She was a prolific writer and researcher, consistently providing intellectual ammunition for the movement. Her ability to dissect complex political and economic issues and articulate them in accessible language made her an invaluable asset. She understood the power of propaganda and counter-propaganda, meticulously documenting the atrocities of the apartheid regime and disseminating this information to the world. This played a crucial role in galvanizing international opposition to apartheid.

Joe Slovo, as a lawyer and later a key leader of the SACP and the armed wing of the African National Congress (ANC), Umkhonto we Sizwe (MK), was instrumental in the practical implementation of resistance strategies. His legal acumen allowed him to anticipate and counter the legal maneuvers of the apartheid state. He was a master strategist, adept at clandestine operations and guerrilla warfare. Slovo understood that peaceful protest alone would not be sufficient to overthrow the entrenched power of the apartheid regime. He advocated for a multi-pronged approach, combining political mobilization with armed struggle, recognizing that pressure needed to be applied on all fronts.

While the CPSA was a driving force, the broader anti-apartheid movement gained significant momentum with the formation of organizations like the United Democratic Front (UDF) in the 1980s. The UDF, a broad coalition of anti-apartheid civic organizations, trade unions, and religious groups, became a powerful force for mass mobilization. action.

Umkhonto we Sizwe: The Spear of the Nation

Slovo was a founding member of MK and played a crucial role in its establishment and early operations. He understood the necessity of armed resistance as a means of self-defense and as a way to exert pressure on the apartheid regime.

Slovo was instrumental in developing MK's strategies, which initially focused on sabotage of government infrastructure to avoid casualties. He was involved in planning and executing numerous sabotage missions, aiming to disrupt the apartheid state's ability to function effectively. His legal background proved invaluable in advising on the legal implications of MK's actions and in navigating the complexities of international law concerning armed struggle. He understood that the goal was not indiscriminate violence, but a calculated campaign to weaken the apartheid system and force it to negotiate.

Ruth First, while not directly involved in the military operations of MK, provided crucial intellectual and moral support for the armed struggle. She understood the desperation that led to the formation of MK and recognized its strategic necessity. Her writings and speeches often contextualized the use of force within the broader struggle for liberation, emphasizing that it was a response to state-sponsored violence and oppression. He was also deeply involved in the planning and execution of MK's operations from abroad, coordinating training for MK cadres and securing resources. His experiences in exile allowed him to gain a broader perspective on international relations and to leverage global solidarity for the South African cause.
