This can highlight a potential for improvement in casting approaches, moving towards casting that aligns with a more inclusive vision of the world. A discussion could take place regarding the importance of diverse casting and cultural sensitivity in storytelling. Subjectivity and Interpretation: Every actor brings their own perspective to a role, and their portrayal can differ depending on interpretation and directorial input. This can lead to discussions on how different productions or interpretations impact individual experiences with the story. Perhaps a series of critical analyses of the different film adaptations would be worthwhile. The Tension between Story and Adaption: It is essential to recognize the potential for misinterpretations when translating a book to film. The casting might not fully capture the complexities of the characters present in C.S. Lewis's original work, which was written in a specific context and era. This requires an acknowledgement of the different nuances of the written and visual mediums, which are likely not entirely interchangeable. Modern Comparisons and Critique: Looking back at previous castings through a modern lens can generate discussions about societal shifts in representation. For example, we could consider how the representation of the characters compared to the portrayal of similar themes in modern films. Personal
