The Genesis of a Cherished Hymn

Before we dive into the notes themselves, it's important to understand the story behind "Morning Has Broken." The lyrics are attributed to Eleanor Farjeon, an English writer and poet, who penned them in 1931. However, the melody to which we most commonly hear the hymn sung is much older. It's a traditional folk tune, likely originating from England, known as "The Old Hundredth" or "Leoni." Farjeon's lyrics beautifully capture the essence of a new day dawning, filled with gratitude for God's creation and the promise of a fresh start. Phrases like "Morning has broken, like the first morning," and "Bird has responded, with morning's first song," paint vivid imagery that resonates deeply with listeners. It's this perfect marriage of poetic sentiment and a stirring, memorable tune that has cemented its place in hymnals and concert halls alike.

From Folk Tune to Global Hymn

The fusion of Farjeon's lyrics with the "Leoni" melody proved to be a stroke of genius. The tune itself is characterized by its gentle, ascending phrases, which perfectly complement the lyrical theme of awakening and praise. The simplicity of the melody makes it accessible and easily memorable, contributing to its widespread adoption. The hymn gained significant popularity in the mid-20th century, particularly after being recorded by folk singer Cat Stevens (now Yusuf Islam) on his 1971 album *Teaser and the Firecat*. While Stevens' recording is an interpretation, it brought the song to a global audience and further solidified its place in popular culture, often leading people to seek out the sheet music for their own instrumental or vocal renditions.

in the key of C Major or G Major, the song often employs a relatively simple chord vocabulary, making it accessible for intermediate musicians. However, its true beauty lies in the subtle variations and the rhythmic phrasing that breathe life into the notes.

Key Signatures and Time Signatures

The choice of key significantly influences the overall mood of a piece. C Major, with its absence of sharps or flats, often conveys a sense of purity and directness. G Major, with one sharp, can introduce a slightly warmer, more resonant quality. Regardless of the specific key, the sheet music of "Morning Has Broken" generally utilizes a common time signature, such as 4/4. This consistent pulse allows for a steady, flowing, and easily digestible rhythm, mirroring the unhurried unfolding of a new day.

Melodic Construction: The Ascent and Descent of Joy

The melody of "Morning Has Broken" is a masterful study in melodic contour. It often begins with an ascending phrase, symbolizing the dawn breaking and the ascent of the sun. This upward movement creates a sense of hope and anticipation. As the melody progresses, it typically features stepwise motion and small leaps, avoiding jarring intervals.
