But it doesn't stop there. Many such resources also incorporate transliteration, which is the representation of Tigrinya sounds using the English alphabet. This is incredibly helpful for pronunciation, especially for learners who are still developing their auditory recognition of English phonemes.

For example, if you're learning the English word "hello," the resource will provide its Tigrinya equivalent (ሰላም - selam) and likely a transliterated version like "selam." This multi-pronged approach ensures that learners grasp not only the meaning but also the correct pronunciation of English words, which is a significant hurdle for many language learners.

However, when you can see tangible results, like understanding a new English sentence or successfully translating a phrase, your confidence grows. A resource that breaks down complex concepts and provides immediate understanding in your native language can be a huge motivator.
