The Genesis of a Visionary Experience

Mary Baxter's journey to writing "A Divine Revelation of Heaven" is rooted in a profound personal encounter that began in 1976. While recovering from a severe illness, Baxter experienced what she describes as a supernatural encounter with God. This event, which she details extensively in her book, marked the commencement of a series of visions that would span several years. These were not fleeting glimpses but extended, immersive journeys into the spiritual realms. Baxter asserts that she was personally guided by Jesus Christ through the celestial city, the courts of heaven, and even the terrifying depths of hell. The immediacy and clarity of these experiences form the bedrock of her testimony, making her narrative feel not like a speculative theological treatise, but a firsthand report from beyond the veil.

Unveiling the Celestial City: A Glimpse of Heaven

Baxter recounts meeting various biblical figures, including angels and deceased loved ones, all of whom are described as being in a state of perfect happiness and communion with God. The absence of pain, suffering, and sin in heaven is a recurring theme, offering a powerful antidote to the hardships of earthly existence.

4. The Reality of Sin's Consequences: Hell serves as a tangible representation of the ultimate price of unrepented sin.
